A NEW

TO MY

HONOURED FRIEND

Charles Killigrew, Esq;

WHATSOEVER Your Modesty can plead to the contrary, it were a Wrong done to You to Dedicate this Spanish Dictionary to any but Your self. You have an undoubted Right to it on several accounts; for Your great share of that Learning and Erudition, which is the Noblest Ornament of a Gentleman; for Your Knowledge in and Affection to the Spanish Tongue; for that particular Friendship and Favour You are pleas'd to honour me with; and above all, for being the chief Promoter and Encourager of this Work. It is Your Peculiar Genius to forward all that tends to the Advancement of Learning, and Your Assistance is ever ready to back those that can any way contribute towards it. You have found experimentally how great an Improvement and Addition the understanding of Languages is to Knowledge in General, and are therefore always zealous to promote the rendring of them easy. My Talent is so small, that I had nothing to offer which might be of publick use, unless it were the communicating of as much of the Spanish Tongue as Nature and several Years reading have made me Master of. But that ungrateful and almost endless Labour of compiling a Dictionary was ever dreadful to me, and I even wonder'd how so many Men had undertaken so difficult and unpleasant a Task, Besides the Drudgery and Toil, I was sensible it had so little Prospect of any sutable Reward, that I could not propose to my self the Wages of a Day-Labourer for the Days, or rather Years devoted to such a Work. I own I had not so Publick a Spirit as even to think of engaging in so laborious an Undertaking out of mere good Nature to serve others. Whatsoever Men may pretend, they seldom employ their Capacity without some prospect of Advantage. The Soldier Fights for his Pay, the Lawyer Pleads for his Fee, and even the Church-Man Preaches for his Benefice. I cannot presume to exceed them all in Generosity, I saw no likelihood of Encouragement, and consequently had no Thoughts of entring my self upon the Service gratis, for according to the Spanish Proverb, Quién háze por común háze por ningún.

You alone, Sir, remov'd all my Obstacles; You encourag'd me to begin, and you still prompted me to proceed. Whatever is perform'd is due to you; if the Publick receives any Benefit, You are the Source it flow'd from; if Private Persons find an Advantage, to You they owe their Acknowledgments. I was but like the Earth, which tho' it have the Seeds of all Things in it, yet it produces nothing without the Sun warms and cherishes it. It was Your Influence that produc'd and ripen'd this, which might otherwiſe have ever remain'd an Embrio. What is in it amiſs muſt be own'd the Effect of my Ignorance, if there be any thing good, I confeſs it is brought forth by Your Aſſiſtance.

Sir, There is no doubt but Dedications were originally no other but Acknowledgments made to the Encouragers of Learning, and Panegyricks on thoſe deſerving Perſons. We live in an Age, when Learning and Gentility are almoſt thought incompatible, and the Difficulty of finding a worthy Patron is even greater than that of writing. It is eaſy to prefix a great Title before a Book, but to find thoſe Qualifications which are requiſite in a Patron, Hic labor, hoc opus. I will ſay no more of others, and all I dare add is, that in You I have found a Perſon fitly qualify'd for a Noble Subject of a Dedication; but then You have ty'd up my Hands, You have forbid me giving You what is Your due, You have confin'd me to a barren Epiſtle without the Liberty of expreſſing my Knowledge of You. Yet in this I reſt ſatisfy'd, that Your Character is better known than I am able to deliver it, and if my Work ſhall deſerve to remain to Poſterity, that Modeſty which has obſtructed my recording Your Deſerts, will remain an indelible Teſtimony of Your Worth. That my Labours may anſwer Your Expectation, and that all Proſperity may ever attend You, are the Wiſhes of,

SIR,

Your Moſt Obliged, and

Moſt Obedient Humble Servant,

JOHN STEVENS.

THE PREFACE.

THE Roman Empire having ſpread it ſelf over the better part of the then known World, that People which was no leſs Politick than Brave, took care to introduce its Language into all parts of its Conqueſts, making it by that means ſo Univerſal, that there was ſcarce any Nation under the Dominion of Rome, where the Latin was not underſtood, at leaſt by the better ſort; and in proceſs of time it ſo far prevail'd in ſeveral Countries, that it caus'd the Ancient Natural Language to be utterly forgot, and only that of the Conquerors to be us'd and ſucceed in the place of it. However, upon the declining of the ſaid Empire, and all its Provinces being overrun by Barbarous Nations, as Huns, Alans, Vandals, Goths, and many others, ſome of thoſe Provinces quite loſt the Latin Tongue again, and took up with that of their Barbarous new Maſters; others made a mixture of their own, which had remain'd among the rude Multitude, with that of their no leſs unpoliſh'd Victors; and laſtly, others retain'd the Latin, tho' ſomewhat eſtrang'd and diſguis'd, either through Negligence, in thoſe Times of Ignorance and Confuſion, or by every Nation's framing of it to its own Idiom and Accent. The Nations that retain'd the Roman Language, with theſe alterations are Italy, France, and Spain; of the laſt of which we are here to treat, and ſhall only endeavour to ſhow how in general the Spaniſh Language is deriv'd from the Latin, and the great Reſemblance it ſtill has with it; yet not ſo as to confine our ſelves to this particular, but giving an account of what other Languages have any mixture in it, and what elſe ſhall be proper to make it the more plain, and be for the ſatisfaction of curious Perſons.

This Language naturally of it ſelf, and by the Induſtry of the Learned, is become ſo Perfect and Beautiful, that it is nothing inferior to the moſt celebrated of thoſe now in uſe, call'd the living Languages, or even to the Latin from which it is deriv'd; but rather equals them in all Points, and in many Particulars exceeds and ſurpaſſes them. It is ſweet and harmonious, and yet has at the ſame time ſuch a Manly and Mageſtick Grace, that it at once becomes the Mouth of the Soldier, the Courtier, the Preacher, the Stateſman, and the niceſt Lady; and is withal ſo Copious, that there is nothing wanting in it to expreſs whatſoever can be found in all others put together.

It will be needleſs to go about to prove that the Spaniſh is deriv'd from the Latin. They that are deſirous to be fully inform'd in this particular, may read it laid down at large in Alderete's three Books of the Original of the Spaniſh Tongue; and without that trouble may ſee it in only turning over this Dictionary, in which a great Multitude of Words, or rather the whole Bulk of the Language, ſome few Words excepted, being either true Latin, or at leaſt Latin only a little vary'd in the Pronunciation, or Signification, plainly demonſtrates that the Spaniſh and Latin muſt have been the ſame, tho' diſtance of Time and Places has made them look ſomewhat different at the firſt ſight. Neither can I allow Spaniſh to be as generally call'd a Corruption of Latin, becauſe it proceeds from it, any more than the Son is the Corruption of his Father becauſe the Off-ſpring of him. The Corruption of the beſt things Philoſophers ſay is the worſt, and by that Rule this would have prov'd a Barbarous and Vile Language; but inſtead of that, like a true Child, it reſembles its Parent, and retains all its Vertues and Perfections, having receiv'd ſuch Improvements from others, that I cannot but queſtion whether the Original be any way preferable to its Off-ſpring. But we will not inſiſt upon its Excellency, leaving every one who is capable, to judge of it; for the Ignorant can neither judge themſelves, nor will they ſtand to the Judgment of thoſe that can. The true Cauſe of the Difference there is betwixt the two Languages is, that the Goths at their firſt coming into Spain choſe to leave their own Language and learn the Latin; but being Warlike Men, and more given to Martial Affairs than to Study, they not only alterr'd the Pronunciation, but in a great Meaſure left out the Declination of Nouns, in which they found ſome difficulty, and ſupply'd the defect thereof with Articles and Prepoſitions, as was us'd in their Mother Tongue, and ſtill continues in the Italian, French and Spaniſh. In Verbs they retain'd ſome of the Conjugations, but utterly loſt the Verbs Paſſive; uſing inſtead thereof the Participles with the Verbs ſer, or aver, to be or to have; as in the Verb Amo, amas, which is both Latin and Spaniſh, but for the Paſſive Amor, amaris, they ſay, ſoy Amado, eres Amado.

Yet notwithſtanding theſe Alterations the Spaniſh retains more of the Latin than any other Language; and tho' many Authors might be quoted to prove this Aſſertion, and that it exceeds all others in Beauty and Elegancy, I will only ſet down the Words of Lucius Marineus Siculus upon this Subject, lib. 5. c. De lingua qua nunc utuntur Hiſpani they are theſe literally Tranſlated from the Latin. Which Language (viz. the Latin) the Barbarous Nations Corrupted, as was ſaid above, which yet could not be ſo deform'd, but that it is more Latin, and nearer to the Roman way of ſpeaking, than the other Languages that are Corrupted from the Roman Tongue, and is more Elegant and Sweeter than all the reſt, except the Greek and Latin, for we read ſome Letters Written in Spaniſh, which are Latin at the ſame time. Several Spaniſh Authors have given many Inſtances of this way of Writing both Spaniſh and Latin in the ſame words and ſenſe; but becauſe theſe are things which do not daily occur, I will give one Inſtance of it for the ſatisfaction of the Curious, it is as follows; Tam inutiles, tam vanas artes tractant gentes, tantas maquinas procurant exquiſitas, ſuperfluas, prolixas, quæ quanto majores, tanto eſt major moleſtia. Moſtrandoſe curioſos dant doctrinas non neceſſarias, collocando tantas horas, depravando tantos animos, quæ quando ſe collocant in arte fructuoſa dant grandes fructus. Eloquentia Romana eſt facillima, ſi profeſſores non tam varias, tam diſcrepantes opiniones renovaſſent. Here we ſee the Words and the Grammar are the ſame in both Languages, and thoſe are the chief parts of which a Tongue is compos'd. So that the Spaniards with good reaſon ſtill call their Language Romance, that is the Roman Tongue, not becauſe it is the ſame with the Roman at this time, but becauſe it was ſo formerly when this Name was given, that is, under the Roman Empire, and has continu'd the ſame as much as poſſibly can be imagin'd, after ſo many Ages, and ſuch mighty Revolutions as it ſuffer'd firſt under the Goths, and next under the African Moors. This Alteration there is conſiſts chiefly in what was mention'd above; that is, the not declining of Nouns, but expreſſing the Caſes by Articles, ſome difference in the Conjugation of Verbs, and the utter loſs of the Paſſive; and beſides, they did not retain all the abundance of Words the Latin afforded, but choſe ſuch as fitted them beſt, and in ſome retaining the Words themſelves yet alter'd the Signification of them, or in thoſe that had many Significations receiv'd the one and rejected the reſt, or elſe only took them in a Metaphorical Senſe; of ſome Verbs they made new Nouns, and adding Particles fram'd new Verbs, here and there increaſing Words with ſome Letters, and in other places diminiſhing them in the ſame Nature; and laſtly, inſerting ſome words of other Languages, as occaſion was found; all which may in ſome ſenſe, if well conſider'd, as juſtly be look'd upon as an Improvement, as taken for a Corruption. I muſt here repeat this particular about many Spaniſh Words, which are either wholly Latin, or at leaſt deriv'd from it, yet do not retain abſolutely the ſame Signification; becauſe the Reader meeting many Words in this Dictionary with ſuch Derivations, and finding the ſenſe to vary, may be apt to judge the Etymology is miſtaken, which he may be aſſur'd is not, but that Cuſtom has ſomewhat alter'd their Signification; and yet if they be well conſider'd they will be found to retain ſomething of their former meaning, either Metaphorically, or in the various Interpretations given them. It is farther to be obſerv'd, that very many Etymologies are from Latin Words ſomewhat out of uſe, which yet were familiar to the Romans, and perhaps were taken from the firſt Conquerors, before the Language was ſo much refin'd as in Cicero's Days. I will here ſet down one Example of each of theſe Variations and no more, referring the Reader for the reſt to this Dictionary, where he may find many; And firſt, for the Declinations, as in his Word Hombre, a Man. Hombre was formerly call'd Home from Homo, and declin'd thus

Sing.	Nom.	Hombre, a Man.	Plural.	Nom.	Hombres, Men.
	Gen.	Del Hombre, of a Man.		Gen.	De los Hombres, of the Men.
	Dat.	Al Hombre, to the Man.		Dat.	A los Hombres, to the Men.
	Acc.	El Hombre, the Man.		Acc.	Los Hombres, the Men.
	Voc.	O Hombre, O Man.		Voc.	O Hombres, O Men.
	Abl.	De el Hombre, from the Man.		Abl.	De los Hombres, from the Men.

As for Verbs I will Inſtance in Amo, which is the ſame both in Latin and Spaniſh, and will not run through all the Moods, Tenſes, and Perſons, which would be too tedious and is the buſineſs of a Grammar, but only touch the Principal.

The reſt I omit as tedious, and not ſo neceſſary here, where the deſign is only an account of the Language in general, without deſcending to teach the Grammar, which is a peculiar Work. An Inſtance of the manner manner of making Verbs Paſſive in Spaniſh was given above, and therefore needs not be repeated; wherefore I proceed to the others. In the Spaniſh word Cáſa, a Houſe, we have an Inſtance of their chuſing one Word among many, and even altering the Signification of it; for in Latin it is well known a Houſe is call'd Domus, Ædes, Tectum, &c. all which Words the Spaniard rejected, and made uſe of Cáſa, which in the Latin is but a Cottage, and in Spaniſh any Houſe, tho' never ſo great. In Latin, Pullus is taken for the Young of either Bird or Beaſt, ſignifying a Colt, as well as a Chicken; but in Spaniſh, Pollo ſignifies only a Chicken. Vultus in Latin is the Face or Countenance, whereas in Spaniſh the Word Bulto, which ſhould be Writ Vulto, but that the Spaniards confound the B and V Conſonant, pronouncing them both alike, ſignifies the Bulk, or outward ſhow or appearance of a thing; becauſe the outward appearance is as it were the Face and all we ſee of it. For making new Nouns out of Verbs we have it in the Word Ida, departure or going away; from the Word Ir, in Spaniſh, and Ire in Latin, which latter has no ſuch Noun. For Verbs frum'd by the addition of Particles we have Deſaguár, to drein, or draw off Water, from the Spaniſh Noun Agua, or the Latin Aqua. The Spaniſh Verb Encanecér, has the addition of the firſt Syllable En to the Latin Caneſcere, and not only this but all other Words in Spaniſh generally loſe the S before the C; and all Verbs the E in the Infinitive Mood, as Amar, for Amare, Crecer, for Creſcere, &c. For Examples of Words borrow'd from other Languages take one of a ſort; Gólpe, a Blow, from the Greek Colpos; Blánco, white, from the Gothick, Blanc; Bólſa, a Purſe, from the Arabick, Borxa; Alberca, a Pool, or Pond, from the Hebrew, Bereca; Guánte, a Glove, from the French, Gant; Sanguiſuéla, or Sanguijuéla, a Leech, from the Italian, Sanguiſuca; and ſo for many more of all theſe and other ſorts of Inſtances, of which I ſhall have occaſion to give more anon, and remit the Reader to the Dictionary, where he will meet with plenty of them all. Now to proceed, there are other Words deriv'd from Latin, which is it ſelf grown obſolete and ſcarce to be found, unleſs perhaps once or twice in ſome ancient Author, as Empegár, to daub, from Impicare, to pitch, us'd by Varro and Columela. Pompeyus Feſtus ſays the Latins formerly call'd Puts Aulas, and thence the Spaniſh, Ollas; but in this we ſee the more Modern Latins call'd them Ollas, and that the Country People inſtead of Aurum ſaid Orum, whence the Word Oro. Hence we may infer that either the Romans pronounc'd Au, like O, as the French do ſtill, or elſe they chang'd Au into O. The Latin E, or Æ, is often chang'd into Ie, as in Cælum, Centum, Decem, &c. which are turn'd to Cielo, Ciénto, Diéz, &c. I is turn'd into E, as Blitum, Infirmus, Lignum, &c. into Bledo, Enfermo, Léno, &c. O into U, and U into O, as Buxus into Box, Coluber into Culébra; O into Ue, as Bonus, Corpus, Follis, into Buéno, Cuérpo, Fuélle; B into V Conſonant, and V Conſonant into B, as Vidua into Biúda, and Herba into Yérva; P into B, as Capra, Lupus, Napus, &c. into Cábra, Lóbo, Nábo, &c. C into G, as Acer, Alacres, Amicus, &c. into Agrio, Alégres, Amigo, &c. In ſome Words br is added for ſound ſake, as in Fames, Homo, &c. which are chang'd into Hámbre, Hómbre, &c. When in Latin t follows c, the Spaniſh changes it into h, as dictus, directus, Lactuca, into, Dicho, Derécho, Lechúga. The d in Latin Words is much left out when they become Spaniſh, as Cadere, Comedere Concludere, are converted into Caer, Comér, Concluir, &c. Formerly the Spaniards preſerv'd the F where they found it in the Latin, but of late Years they generally turn it into H, as Faba, Facere, Fungus, &c. into Hába, Hazér, Hóngo, &c. G is ſometimes chang'd into Y, as Gelu, Gemma, Plaga, into Yélo, Yéma, Plága, &c. In ſome words the G is added, as in Amárgo, for Amarus, in Gánſo, for Anſer. In others it is loſt or left out, as in Corréa, for Corrigia, Frío, for Frigus; in others L is turn'd into J Conſonant, as in Ajo for Allium, Artejo for Articulus; in others R into L, Cárcel for Carcer, Celébro for Cerebrum; in others N is loſt, as in Iſla for Inſula, Coſér, for Conſuere; in others it is added, as in Lantérna for Laterna, Mancha for Macula; in others L is ſubſtituted for P, as Llága for Plaga, Llánto for Planctus. X often takes the place of S, as Xabón for Sapo, Ximia for Simia; ſo does D that of T, as Cadéna for Catena, Nadár for Natáre.

Having ſaid ſo much of the Latin, as the Ground-work and principal Superſtructure of the Spaniſh Tongue, it remains in the next place to give ſome ſhort account of what Additions it has receiv'd from other Languages; to which purpoſe we will begin with the Arabick, as that which has moſt prevail'd by the long continuance of the Moors in Spain, tho' in reality all that remians of theirs is but inconſiderable. The moſt general rule commonly given to know the Arabick Words in Spaniſh is their beginning in Al; but this Rule does not always hold good, becauſe there are many Arabick Words which do not begin in Al in Spaniſh, and there are ſeveral Spaniſh Words beginning in Al which are not Arabick; as to inſtance in this latter ſort; Altár, an Altar; Ala, a Wing; Alabáſtro, Alabaſter; Alegria, Mirth; Alano, a Maſtiff-Dog; Alce, an Elk; Albúra, whiteneſs; and very many more, too long to enumerate. But for thoſe Words which are really Arabick, they are form'd by joyning the Arabick Article Al to the Arabick Proper Name, and ſo making but one Word of both; for this Article Al ſignifies The, thence for inſtance the Spaniſh Words Almiſcle, compos'd of Al and Miſe, in Arabick, Muſk; Albárda, from Al and Barda, in Arabick, a Packſaddle; Albéitar, from Al, and Beitharah, in Arabick, Farrierſhip; and ſo in all the reſt. However, as I ſaid before fore, there are very many Arabick Words receiv'd into the Spaniſh Tongue, which do not begin with Al, as Atalàya, a Watch Tower, or the Watchman on it, from the Arabick, Thalàa, ſignifying take heed, becauſe the Sentinels ſtanding on them us'd to cry ſo to Paſſengers; Azófar, Copper, from the Arabick, Soffar, a Copperſmith; Cáfres, the People about the Cape of Good Hope in Africk, from their Arabick Name Kofarah; Berengénas the fruit Botaniſts call Mala inſana, from the Arabick Badelgian; Mómia, Mummy, from the Arabick, Mourmia; Nadir, the point in the Heavens directly under our Feet, from the Arabick, Nadhir, ſignifying Oppoſite; Zenid the Zenith, or Vertical Point, corruptly from the Arabick, Semt al ras, ſignifying the Way or Point of the Head, &c. Thus much for the Arabick.

As for the Gothick Words, tho' it is certain there muſt be many, thoſe People having, after the Romans, been the ſole Maſters of Spain, till the Conqueſt of the Moors, yet they are the hardeſt to be diſcover'd, that Lauguage being now unknown, tho' Authors do mention ſome, and the beſt Rule we have to diſcover them by is by their reſembling the Northern Languages, the Goths certainly coming from thoſe parts, as in Bòſque a Wood, in Dutch, Boſch; Bandéra, a Colours, in Dutch, Vendel; Càça, Game, or Hunting, in Dutch, Jacht; Yèlmo, a Helmet, like the Engliſh; Tripas, the Guts, like Tripe; Juglár, a Jugler; Eſcanciár, to Skink about; Pláça a place; Riquèza, Riches; Robàr, to Rob. In all which we ſee the reſemblance either with the Dutch, or Engliſh, both of them deriv'd from the Teutonick, to which there is no doubt but the Gothick was ally'd; to which purpoſe much might be ſaid in this place, but that it would perhaps be thought too remote from the preſent matter in hand. To theſe Gothick Words we may add the German, as coming from the ſame Original, of which ſort I find none in Spaniſh but the Names of Winds, as Norte, North; Noruéſte, Nor-Weſt; Nordéſte, North-Eaſt; Sur, South; Suduéſte, South-Weſt; Suéſte, South-Eaſt; Loéſte, or Oéſte, Weſt; Léſte, Eaſt; and ſo of all the other Points of the Compaſs.

I know not well what to ſay of French Words, becauſe the French and Spaniſh Tongues being of an equal ſtanding, the former might as well borrow from the Latter, as the latter from the former; but certain it is, there are many Words in the two Languages which bear a great reſemblance to one another, as Alabárda and Halebard; Bánco and Banc; Calſónes and Calſons; Guardaróba and Garderobe; Jardin and Jardin; Ligéro and Leger; Mojár and Mouiller; Nivél and Niveau; Orgúllo and Orgueil; Pàta and Patte; Rójo and Rouge; Salvàge and Sauvage; Tácha and Tache; Viánda and Viande, &c.

Some Words the Spaniſh has borrow'd form the Greek, but moſt of them being before become Latin, we may rather ſay, they receiv'd them from the Romans as Latin, than from the Grecians as Greek. Some take pains to find Hebrew, Syriack, and Chaldaick Words in the Spaniſh, which is a fruitleſs Labour, they being ſo very few and what there are being nearer to be deriv'd from the Latin, or Arabick, which Nations it is likely had taken ſuch Words from thoſe Languages, before they came to be Spaniſh.

Thus have we run through the Original and Improvements of the Spaniſh Tongue from other Languages, plainly ſhewing that it is ſo far from deſerving to be look'd upon as a Corruption of Latin, that it ought rather to be thought an improvement of that ſame Tongue, which it certainly excels in many Points: But I will ſay no more as to this Particular, leſt it be look'd upon as a partial Repetition. What I may add is, that the Spaniſh, as it naturally abounds in Words, ſo from one and the ſame Word it forms more than any other does; as for Inſtance, from the word Tiérra, Earth, are form'd all theſe, Terréro, a Parade; Terréno, Soil; Terrádo, a Terraſs; Terrón, a Clod; Terréſtre, Earthly; Terremóto, an Earthquake, Território, a Precinct; Soterràr, to put under Ground Deſterrár, to Baniſh; Enterrár, to bury; Deſenterrár, to unbury. So from Hiérro, Iron; Herrúmbre, Ruſt; Herrería, a Forge; Herradúra, a Horſe-ſhooe; Herramiénta, a Toole; Cerrójo, quaſi Herrójo, a Bolt; Herradór, a Smith; Herrár, to ſhooe a Horſe; Herrádo, ſhod with Iron; Aherrojádo, bolted. Beſides theſe, the Spaniſh Diminutives are much more numerous than the Subſtantives, becauſe every one of theſe admits of three or four of them; as Hómbre, a Man, makes Hombrecico, Hombrecito, Hombrecillo, and Hombrezuélo, all of them ſignifying a little man; but not all of them in the ſame ſenſe, tho' very many are apt to make no diſtinction; for Hombrecillo ever implies ſomething of contempt, as a pittifull little Fellow; whereas the other three only denote ſmalneſs of Stature. In the ſame manner Mugercilla, ſignifies any ſcandalous Woman; whereas Mugercita, or Mugercica, only denote a little Woman. In the ſame manner as there are Diminutives, there are alſo Magnificatives, if we may ſo call them, which enlarge or aggrandize the thing, as Hómbre, a Man; Hombrázo, or Hombrón, a great Man; Muger, a Woman; Mugeróna, or Mugeráza, a great Woman. It would be tedious to inſiſt upon all particulars, and perhaps be thought only a repetition of what it in its full extent interſpers'd throughout the body of this Work; for which reaſon I ſhall forbear proceeding in this matter, and in the next place give a ſhort account of what Affinity or Similitude remains betwixt the Spaniſh and Portugues Tongues, which may in a great meaſure help thoſe who deſire to be acquainted with both, and give ſome ſatisfaction to the Curious. The moſt uſual Differences betwixt ſuch

Portugues

The PREFACE.

Portugues Words as ſtill reſemble the Spaniſh are theſe; when the latter Ends in N, the former Concludes in M, for Capitán, Capitám; for Gran, Gram; for Tan, Tam. If the Spaniſh ends in on, the Portugues changes that laſt Syllable into ao, or am, as for Paredón, Paredao, or Paredam; for Caxón, Caxao, or Caxám; for Dragón, Dragao, or Dragám. Where the Spaniard uſes ue, the Portugues changes it into o; as for Puérta, Porta; for Huérta, Horta; for Muérto, Morto. The Former adds an I, where the Latter rejects it, as for Ciénto, Cento; for Viénto, Vento; for Diénte, Dente. Where the Spaniard uſes an H, the Portugues Converts it into an F, as for Hijo, Filho; for Hiél, Fel; for Hendído, Fendído. Ll in Spaniſh in the Portugues becomes Ch, as for Lláve, Cháve; for Llága, Chága; for Llúvia, Chuva. The Infinitive Moods of Portugues Verbs for the moſt part are the ſame as the Spaniſh, with only perhaps the Differences above mention'd, as Amar, Abrir, Correr, Saltar, &c. Fazér, for Hazér; Chovér, for Llovèr, &c. The difference in the other Moods and Tenſes would be too long to Inſert, and for the moſt part is ſo ſmall, that whoſoever underſtands the one of theſe Languages, will eaſily know them in the other. Yet we are not to ſuppoſe that this Rule is without Exceptions any more than thoſe above, for there are ſome Portugues Verbs nothing like the Spaniſh, tho' the far greater Number are. In Nouns, beſides the changes of Letters above mention'd, they either add or diminiſh in the Letters, as for Hómbre, they ſay Hóme; for Nóche, Noite; for Múcho, Muito, &c. but the Nouns which have no reſemblance are very many, as for the Spaniſh, Sombréro, a Hat, Chapeo; for Cuchillo, a Knife; Fáca, for Guántes, Gloves; Luvas, for Piénſo, I think; Cuido.

To return to the Spaniſh Tongue conſider'd in it ſelf, the only Objection I have heard againſt it is the Sounding or Pronouncing of the Syllables, Ja, or Xa; Ge, or Xe; Gi, or Xi; Jo, or Xo; Ju, or Xu. Theſe I confeſs ſome People make a difficulty in Pronouncing, and therefore reckon them Harſh and Barbarous, whereas if they rightly conſider'd it, the Fault is rather in their unaptneſs to utter them, or in their over fondneſs of their own Tongue than in the Sounds themſelves, which appear no way uncooth to any that are once Maſters of them. Nor are they peculiar to the Spaniſh, which certainly receiv'd them from the Arabick; a Language ſo far from being counted Barbarous, that it was once reckon'd among the Learned, and has ſtill its place in Univerſities. Beſides that theſe Sounds have ſomething manly in them and are rather made uſe of, like Bugbears to fright Children, than becauſe in themſelves there is any real Deformity. But it is not the Arabick alone which allows of them, for they are Common to moſt if not all the Oriental Languages, as I have been convinc'd by hearing ſeveral Words of them ſpoken or read by ſuch as underſtood them, being my ſelf a Stranger to them. However we need not go ſo far for them, for tho' I do not call to mind that they are to be found in the French, or Italian, it is evident they are in all thoſe Tongues which have any thing of the Teutonick, as in the Dutch, Acht, Eight; Nacht, Night; Dach, Day, and many more of the very ſame Pronunciation. Nay the Engliſh is not free from them, as is plain in the Words, what, why, which, and the like; and if the difficulty they find in Pronouncing any Words they are not us'd to, be a ſufficient Reaſon, other Nations might as well complain of the Barbarity of the Engliſh Tongue, becauſe very many cannot diſtinctly utter the Th ſo much us'd by us, but inſtead of this, that; ſay Dis, Dat; for a Thouſand, a Touſand; and ſo in the reſt.

The general Language of Spain is that we hear treat of, which is ſpoken in the greateſt Perfection in Caſtile, and therefore ſometimes call'd Caſtilian. Other Provinces are not ſo refin'd, as we ſee in England, where the farther we go from London, the more uncooth the Dialect appears, as not ſo eaſily Poliſh'd among the ruder Country People. So the Kingdom of Galicia retains more of the Ancient harſh Spaniſh us'd when that Nation was oppreſs'd by the Infidels; Portugal differs but little from Galicia; Andaluzia, as laſt poſſeſs'd by the Moors, retains much of their Dialect; as do Murcia, and Valencia. In Catalonia the better ſort Speak the pure Caſtilian, the meaner People much Corrupted; but they have beſides a peculiar Language of their own, not underſtood by other Spaniards. This is a ſort of Limoſine, or that of the Country of Limoges; being an old barbarous French, formerly brought into this Country out of France, on which it Borders and with which it always had much Intercouſe. However this Tongue of theirs is not pure but intermixt with many Ancient Spaniſh, Arabick, and other Words. The Kingdoms of Aragon and Navarre uſe the Spaniſh, but not ſo refin'd as Caſtile, being ſomewhat vitiated by their Neighbourhood with France. The Biſcainers generally do not attain to the Perfection of this Language, for which reaſon as many Stories are told of them in Caſtile, as are in England of the Welſh, and Iriſh, and with as little Reaſon; for they are a very Ingenious People, the beſt Sailors in all Spain, generally the ableſt Penmen, and as good Soldiers as any. Beſides, they ſtill retain among themſelves that which was doubtleſs the Original Language of the Nation, before the coming of the Carthaginians or Romans, the firſt of which never ſubdu'd them, nor did the latter till the Days of Auguſtus Cæſar. The Goths could ſcarce maſter them, and the Moors could never get any Footing among them; ſo that they have preſerv'd both their Blood and their Language the freeſt from mixture of any People in Europe. This Baſquiſh is ſo different from all the other European Languages that there is no giving any account of it, for none underſtand it but themſelves, and therefore no wonder if thoſe who hear it ſpoke, think it harſh and unpleaſant, which as I have hinted before may rather be attributed to our own want of Knowledge ledge and Familiarity with it, than to any real defect in the Idiom, as we see Ignorant Persons ridicule the most Learned Languages, because they are above their Capacities. I am not Ignorant that some Authors have pretended to find a resemblance betwixt the Basquish and Chaldean, but as I am not acquainted with either I shall not presume to handle that Point, but only add, that as I believe they both came from the Tower of Babel, so I do not question but they may perhaps retain some Similitude.

It remains that I say something of what is perform'd in this Work, which shall be as little as may be, lest I be thought too fond of my own Production. What I may declare without being Guilty of that Imputation is, that it has been the Work of several Years, tho' for some of them without any design of appearing in Print, but having always been much inclin'd to reading of Spanish Books I only Collected for my own Satisfaction and Information, till at length by the persuasion of some Gentlemen, Curious in that Tongue I resolv'd to undertake so difficult and unpleasant a Work. To this Effect I have made use of all the Spanish Dictionaries of any Note, which have appear'd in England, interpreted by English, French or Italian; and particularly of Covarrubias, which is Spanish explain'd by Spanish; and Ælius Antonius Nebrissensis, being Spanish and Latin; besides, as was mention'd before, my continual reading of Spanish Books of all sorts. For my Knowledge in the Tongue, I was bred to it from my Infancy, and have ever endeavour'd to improve my Knowledge in it by reading, not only of Historians, but of Poets, Orators, Travellers, and other Books of all sorts of Literature. The Title-Page shews what is promis'd in this Work, and therefore it would be superfluous to repeat it. I am not so vain as to expect to appear without a Fault, yet I hope some few Literals that perhaps may have escap'd will not be imputed to me, it being almost impossible to Print without them, tho' all possible Care has been taken in Correcting. The Number of Words in this beyond any other Dictionary is very great, and they have all their true Sense given them in English. I doubt not but many will set up for Judges of the Performance, and the greater Number such as understand it least. These always are sure to find fault, either out of Vanity to be thought Judicious, or out of Spight and Envy that any Man should know more than themselves. Let them proceed and work their own Shame, and let the well-meaning part of Mankind make use of my Endeavours.

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. WORDS that have Minsh. or Oudin after the English, are such as I find no where but in one of those Dictionaries, and therefore have just Cause to suspect they are scarce good Spanish.

2. In some Places Spanish Authors are quoted for such Words as are not common.

3. The Proverbs are to be found under the first Substantive in them, or else at the Substantive there is a Reference where to find them. But if they be such as have no Substantive in them, then are they to be look'd for under the first Verb.

4. B and V Consonant being pronounc'd exactly alike, whatsoever Words are not to be found under the one of them, must be look'd for under the other. The same is to be observ'd betwixt the ç and z, they being both sounded alike, as well as the other two.

5. The Letter X before a Consonant being pronounc'd like s, Spanish Authors sometimes use either of them indifferently, and therefore those Words in which they are found are here generally set down in both Places, but if any should have escap'd under the one, the Reader may find them in the other; as Expuesto, or Espuesto, &c.

6. X before a or u may be as well spelt with j Consonant; for which reason such Words are to be found in either Place, as Baxar, or Bajar; Axuar, or Ajuar. But if i follows the x, then it is chang'd into g, as Faxina, or Fagina, &c.

7. Ph being seldom or never us'd by Spaniards, the Greek or Latin Words which are writ with those Letters are here under F, as for Philosopho, see Filosofo, &c.

A SPA-

DICTIONARY.

A, The first Letter of the Alphabet, not only with the Spaniards, but with all Nations. The first also of the Vowels, as standing in need of no other to be pronounced, as the Consonants do. In Spanish it is pronounced as in Latin, that is, opening the Mouth; as in the Words All, Hall, &c. not as in the Words Hard, Bard, and others of that kind. Its Pronunciation is so natural and easy, that it is the first Sound new-born Infants form, and even Dumb People are not depriv'd of it. The Greeks call it Alpha, the Hebrews Aleph, the Arabs Aliph, the Phœnicians Alioz, the Indians Alephu, and so other Nations.

A, is the beginning of Spanish Verbs form'd out of Nouns, as Alanceár, Abraſár, Acarreár, from Lánça, Bráſa, Cárro, &c.

A, a Preposition, to, at, towards.

A, an Adverb, a way of calling, as A Juán, Ho there John; also a Note of reprehension, as A traviéſſo, O unlucky one.

A, a Verb the third Person singular of the Verb E, or He; as Yo be, I have, Tu has, Thou hast, El ha, or a, He has.

A, sometimes stands for Ay; as Múchos diás a, many Days since.

A, denotes the Dative Case, as Dádlo a Pédro, give it to Peter; sometimes the Accusative, as ámo a Diós, I love God; and sometimes the Infinitive Mood, as voy a comér, I go to eat.

A, A, A, expresses the Dumb Man's want of Speech; as also denotes laughter, but in this Sense it is generally writ with the Aspiration, or Letter H, as ha, ha, ha.

Aarón, o Barba de Aaron, the Herb Wake-robbin or Calves-feet; also the Proper Name Aaron.

Aba, take heed, beware, as Aba el lobo, take heed of the Woolf.

Ababól, a Poppey. Vide Amapóla.

Abaco, The Abacus is a quadrangular piece, commonly accompanied with a Cymatium, and serving instead of a Corona, or Drip to the Capital, whereof it is the Superior, or highest part; that is, it supports the lower face of the Architrave. So call'd from the Greek Abacion, which signifies a square Trencher or Table.

Abacóa, one of the Lucayan Islands of America, 12 Leagues long, and hardly half a League broad.

Abád, An Abbot, chief of a Monastery of Monks of the Orders of St. Benedict, St. Bernard, St. Basil, and some others. In Spain some Houses of Canons Regulars have Abbots. There is also an Abbot in some Collegiate Churches, who is not Chief, as at Toledo, the Abbot of S. Leocadia. In the Country in Spain they also in many places call the Curate, or chief Priest of the Parish, Abád. It is deriv'd from the Hebrew, Aba, signifying a Father, Superior, or Master.

Prov. El Abád de dónde cánta yánta: Where the Abbot sings, there he gets his Dinner. To signify that Churchmen are to live by their Function.

Prov. Cómo cánta el Abád reſpónde el monacíllo: As the Abbot sings, so the Acolyte, or the Clerk answers. To advise Men to good Breeding, because tho' a Man be a Superior, if he gives bad Language, he may meet with worse. Our Scolds say, I gave her as good as she brought, much to the same Effect.

Prov. De Cása del Abád, comér y llevár: At the Abbot's House eat and carry away. To shew the great Hospitality of Abbots and Church-men, and especially their Charity to the Poor, who have enough to eat and carry away.

Prov. Abád, y Balleſtéro: An Abbot and Cross-bow-man, or as we say now, a Gunner. A Reflection upon Church-men, who presume, contrary to the Canons, to follow Hunting, or such like Sports. A general Term to express a scandalous Church-man.

Prov. Adelánte eſtá la cása del Abád: The Abbot, or the Curate's House is farther on. An uncharitable way of refusing any thing that is ask'd, as Lay-men us'd to do by Pilgrims, or other Poor, sending them away to the Curate's, or Religious Houses.

Prov. Abád avariénto, por un bodígo pierde ciénto: A covetous Curate loses an hundred Loafs, or Cakes, to get one. This is when the Curate quarrels with a Parishioner for not offering, and he never offers after. Not unlike, All covet, all loss.

Prov. Abád de Carçuéla comiſtes la ólla, pedís la caçuéla: Curate of çarcuela eats up the Pot, and asks for the Pipkin. This was some very hungry Curate of that Place, from whom it became a Proverb apply'd to any man that has had much and still covets more.

Prov. Abád balaguéro, tenéd el cuéllo quédo. Fawning Abbot, hold your Neck still. Applied to any Man that is over-ceremonious, cringing and fawning, and uses many indecent Actions with his Head.

Prov. Quándo el Abád láme el cuchíllo, mal pára el monacíllo: When the Curate licks the Knife it's bad for the Acolyte, or Clerk. It is a sign the Commons are short, and when the Master fares ill, it must be worse with the Servant.

S. Abád, a Port in the great Island of California, on the back of North America.

Abáda, a Beast in the East Indies of a great bulk, cover'd with a sort of Shells or Scales, like Armour, and proof against any Weapon, and having one Horn in the Forehead, commonly call'd a Rhinoceros.

Abadéjo, that sort of Salt-fish we call Poor Jack. The Bird call'd a Wag-tail. And the Fly we call the Spanish Fly, or Cantharis, us'd for raising Blisters.

Abadéngo, belonging to an Abbot; the Territory belonging to an Abby.

Abadéſa, an Abbess of a Monastery of religious Women.

Abadía the Dignity of an Abbot, or an Abby.

Ababádo, close cover'd, so that the Steam is kept in.

Ababár, to cover close, to keep in Steam, and therefore sometimes us'd for stifling, because that keeps in the Breath. From Báho, the Steam.

Abajár, vid. Abaxár.

Abaládo, Obs. loose, puffy, not lying close.

Abalançádo, put or thrust forward, hazarded.

Abalançadór, one that thrusts forward, or hazards.

Abalançar, Pres. Abalárço, Abalánças, Abalánça, Imperf. Abalançava, Pret. Abalançé, Abalançáſte, Abalançó. Imp. Abalánça. to put forward, to venture, to hazard, saying or doing any thing without Consideration. From the Greek Ballo, to cast or throw.

Abaldonádo, reproach'd, ill spoken of; also as Abandonádo, abandon'd, forsaken.

Prov. El Aſno a la vihuéla: The aſs to the Lute. This they ſay when a Man pretends to thoſe things he does not underſtand, as an Ignorant Perſon pretending to talk Learnedly, which is as if an Aſs ſhould pretend to play upon a Lute.
Prov. Dádle al Aſno: Put on the Aſs. We ſay, drive on Carman; which is to ſay, a Man would rather be hang'd than Marry an ugly Woman. For in Spain Criminals are carry'd to Execution upon an Aſs, inſtead of the Cart us'd in England.
Prov. El Aſno, y la mugér, a palos ſe han de Vencér: an Aſs, and a Woman are to be Conquer'd with a Cudgel. The Occaſion of this Proverb they ſay was a Carrier, who coming to a narrow Paſſage could not get his Aſs to go on, and fell a beating of him unmercifully, till a Traveller coming by and reproving him for ſo doing he bid him hold his peace, for an Aſs and a Woman were to be overcome with a Cudgel. The Traveller who had an ill Wife went home and try'd the Experiment upon Her, which he found had good Effect, and ſo the Proverb held good.
Prov. No cómpres Aſno de recuéro, ni te caſes con hija de Meſonéro: Do not buy an Aſs of a Carrier, nor Marry an Inn-keepers Daughter. The reaſon, becauſe if a Carrier ſels his Aſs, which he has ſo much uſe for himſelf, he muſt either be very bad, or old, or ſold dear; and for the Inn-keepers Daughter, ſhe is expos'd to ſo much Company and ſo many Temptations, that it is hard for her to to come off untainted.

Prov. Quien al Aſno alába, tal hijo le náſca: He that praiſes the Aſs, may he have ſuch a Son born to him. That is, may he that is overfond of mean things never know better, but may all he has be mean.

Prov. Aſno coxo mas avíſa de madrugár: Lame Aſs, you ought to get up earlier. This is apply'd to thoſe who are dull, ſlow, or unhandy, and therefore cannot compaſs their buſineſs in time, it adviſes them to riſe early that they may have leiſure to perform their Affairs, ſince Nature has obſtructed their doing them as quick as others.

Prov. Aſno con oro, alcánçalo todo: An Aſs loaded with Gold overtakes every thing. That is, tho' a man be never ſo much an Aſs, if he has but Money enough, he may do what he pleaſes.

Prov. Aſno malo cabe caſa agníja ſin palo: An ill Aſs puts on when he is near home without beating. This we ſee in all Jades, which when they know they are drawing towards home, will go without Whip or Spur.

Prov. Aſno coxo, y hombre roxo, y el Demúño, todo es uno: A lame Aſs, and a red Hair'd Man, and the Devil, are all one. So ill a conceit they have of red Hair, and as for a lame Beaſt every Body knows it is plague enough.

Prov. Aſno de muchos lobos le comen: The Wolves devour the Aſs that belongs to many owners. Becauſe if he has many owners none of them look to him. Therefore we ſay, What is every Bodies buſineſs is no Bodies buſineſs.

Prov. Burlárs con el Aſno dáros ha en la cára con el rabo: Jeſt with an Aſs, and he'll flap you in the Face with his Tail. If you make your ſelf familiar, or jeſt with mean people, you muſt expect no better than a ſlap in the Face with their Tail; that is, ſome brutiſh words or actions.

Prov. Caydo ha el Aſno en el Alcacél: The Aſs is fallen among the Green Barley. This is to expreſs a miſchance attended with ſome good Circumſtance which alleviates, or quite blots it out; as is ſignify'd by the Aſs falling among green Barley, where tho' he had the ill luck to fall, yet he may fill his Belly to enable him to go on.

Prov. Deſque no púdo al Aſno, tornaſe al albárda: Since he could not be reveng'd upon the Aſs he falls upon the Packſaddle. This ſhows the humour of many Men, who when offended, and dare not ſhow their reſentment on them that caus'd it, vent their paſſion on their Wives, Children, Servants, or others they have Power over.

Prov. Habló el Aſno, y díxo Ho, Ho: The Aſs ſpoke and ſaid Ho, Ho. For thoſe who after a long ſilence, as if they had been ſtudying Sentences, break with ſomething which is not at all to the purpoſe.

Prov. Mas vale Aſno que me lleve, que cavallo que ne derrueque: I had rather have an Aſs that will carry me, than a Horſe that will throw me. That is, I had rather be contented with a moderate conveniency, or with indifferent things which I can compaſs, and manage, than with Greatneſs that may coſt me a fall.

Prov. Mas vale con mal Aſno contendér, que la leña acueſtas traér: It is better to ſtrive with an ill Aſs, than to carry the Wood upon ones Back. A bad Servant is better than to do ones own work.

Prov. Al Aſno muérto la cevádа al rabo: When the Aſs is dead the Barley at his Tail. A reproof to them that are ſlow in doing good even when it is too late, or even then miſplace it; as it is after a poor Beaſt is ſtarv'd to lay the Provender to its Tail.

Prov. Al Aſno y al mulo la carga al culo: The Aſs and the Mule muſt have the burthen upon the Rump. That is, they muſt have it laid on behind; but in another Senſe, that brutiſh Men muſt be Cudgell'd as Mules and Aſſes are, behind; for that is alſo a load according to the Spaniſh Phraſe, Una carga de palos. That is, a good beating.

Prov. Sufre el Aſno la carga, mas no la ſobrecarga: The Aſs bears the burthen, but not an over-burthen. That is, we muſt not lay too much upon a Man, tho' he be never ſo patient, for if you over-burthen him, like the Aſs, he'll throw all down.

Prov. Un Aſno entre muchas monas, cocanle todas: When one Aſs is among many Monkeys, they all make Faces at him. When a Cully falls into the hands of many Sharpers they all fleece him. Or, when many Women make a fool of a Man.

Prov. A un Aſno baſtale una albárda: One Pannel is enough for one Aſs. One Employment is enough for one Man.

Prov. A Aſno modórro arriero loco: A mad Carrier for a Jadiſh Aſs. Becauſe a mad fellow will always be thraſhing, talking, and putting him on.

Prov. Eſſo le eſta como al Aſno los corales: That becomes him as a Coral does an Aſs. We ſay, Such a one looks like a Sow Saddled.

Prov. No vee ſiete ſobre un Aſno: He ſees not ſeven as he ſits upon an Aſs. A Man had ſeven Aſſes, drove ſix of them and rode upon the other, as he was going he ſeveral times counted them, and ſtill found but ſix, forgetting that he had one under him, till enquiring of thoſe he met for the ſeventh, one ſhow'd him that he was upon, and then he found out his miſtake. Thence when a Man does not ſee or conceive the moſt obvious things, they ſay, he cannot ſee ſeven when he ſits upon an Aſs. It is not unlike, he cannot ſee Wood for Trees.

Prov. Si uno, dos, y tres te dízen que eres Aſno, ponte un rabo: If one, two, and three tell you, you are an Aſs, put on a Tail. That is, whatever is generally ſaid of you, you muſt of neceſſity acquieſce, for either it is true, or it will be impoſſible for you to undeceive the World.

Prov. Aſno cargádo de oro ſube ligéro por una montáña: An Aſs loaded with Gold climbs a Mountain nimbly. This tho' not verify'd in the literal ſenſe, is to expreſs how readily Men undertake any thing, and with what Alacrity they perform it for the lucre of Gold.

Prov. Caér de ſu Aſno: To fall from his Aſs. When a Man is obſtinate and will take no advice, and diſcovers his Error too late, they ſay he falls from his Aſs; that is, he was before like an Aſs mounted on his own folly, and is then fallen down, being made ſenſible of his Ignorance.

Prov. O morirá el Aſno, o quien le aguíja: Either the Aſs will dye, or his driver. When the Death of one, of two, or more, will deliver a Man out of trouble. Taken from a Man that undertook for a maintenance, and good reward, to make his Aſs ſpeak in a certain term of Years, and a Friend asking him how he came to undertake ſuch an impoſſibility, upon forfeiture of Life, if he fail'd? he anſwer'd, either the Lord will dye, meaning him that kept them, or the Aſs, or the Driver will dye before that time.

In the Weſt Indies theſe are found in the Maw, or Belly of the Indian Sheep, (of which you may ſee more verb. Llamas) ſometimes they find in a Sheep but one, ſometimes two, three, or four; ſome leſs than ſmall Nuts, others as big as Pigeons Eggs, and the Author has ſeen one as big as an Orange. In ſhape ſome are round, ſome Oval, others irregular. As to Colour, there are Black, White, Grey, Greeniſh, and Gold colour. They are made as it were of ſeveral Layers, or Cruſts one upon another. Several Creatures are ſaid to produce them beſides the Llamas, as the Vicuñas, Tarúgas, and Cypris. The Vicuñas commonly yield the largeſt and the Tarugas the beſt. The Stone is of excellent uſe in Phyſick. The beſt Bezoar Stones are thoſe brought from the Eaſt Indies, the next to them thoſe of Peru, and the laſt in order thoſe of New Spain. It has often been found that theſe Stones grow in the Beaſts Maw or Belly, upon ſome bit of Iron or Stick which the Creature has ſwallow'd, theſe things being found in the middle of them, which makes ſome People believe they are Counterfeits, but it is moſt certain they are not. F. Joſ. Acoſt. Nat. Hiſt. W. Ind. lib. 4. chap. 42. pag. 296. Chriſt. Acoſta. Nat. Hiſt. of E. Ind. ſays, the Bezoar is found there in a Creature ſomewhat reſembling a Goat and a Deer, very ſwift, which the Perſians call Pazan. The Perſians, Arabs, and Corazans call this Stone Pazar, from the Beaſt. To know the true Bezoar from the counterfeit they take a little duſt of lime, and wetting any part of the Stone with the tip of the Tongue rub it upon that duſt, which, if true, it dyes of a fine Green; if falſe, it either alters not the colour at all, or very little. It is good againſt all Poiſons, Infections, Melancholy, and inveterate Diſtempers, to cheriſh the Spirits, to drive any thing from the Heart, to create an Appetite, and many more Diſeaſes. *Chriſt. Bódas, the ſame as Bóda, being indifferently us'd, either in the ſingular or plural Number.

Andárſe de Bóda en Bóda, to go from Wedding to Wedding. That is, to live an idle ſpunging Life, always running from one good Houſe to another, or from Feaſt to Feaſt, without taking any pains, or minding any thing but Mirth.

Prov. Aún ſe cóme el pan de la Bóda: The Wedding Bread is ſtill eaten. That is, the Wedding Feaſting is ſcarce over. It is all Love and Mirth. The new married Couple have not had time to find fault with one another, or to fall out, becauſe the Wedding Joys are freſh. It is Honey Moon ſtill.

Prov. A la Bóda de Don García lléva pan en la capílla: Carry Bread in your Hood to Don Garcia's Wedding. That is, Do not confide too much in the Cheer you ſhall have at a Feaſt or Wedding, but provide for your ſelf, leaſt it fall ſhort, as they ſay it happen'd at this D. Garcia's Wedding, who was a poor Gentleman, and had invited many Gueſts, the better ſort had the Dinner ſet before them, and the others were forc'd to take up with a ſecond Table, where Bread being ſcarce, one wiſer than the reſt, pull'd out a piece he had brought from home, and ſaid as above: And he ſays in the Hood, becauſe in former Ages the Men wore great Hoods hanging behind to pull over their Heads upon occaſion, before Hats were in uſe, and made uſe of them as a Pocket. It is a good Advice not to put ſo much Confidence upon others, as not to provide for one's ſelf.

Prov. Bóda buena bóda málà, el Mártes en tu caſa: Whether the Wedding be a good one or a bad one, be at home, or you muſt be at home, on Tueſday. It was once uſual in Spain, eſpecially among the ordinary ſort, to be marry'd upon Saturday, and then they treated their Gueſts that Day, Sunday and Munday. So the Proverb ſays, you muſt be at home on Tueſday, becauſe be the Wedding never ſo ſplendid, the Feaſting is then done; or elſe becauſe it is time to retire to look to your Buſineſs.

Prov. Bóda de Négros: A Wedding of Blacks. That is, all Noiſe and Confuſion. Becauſe thoſe poor People at their Weddings have not the Order and Decency that is obſerved among Gentry; but all talk, ſing, and dance without any Method.

Prov. De bóbos, y bóbas ſe hínchen las Bódas: Weddings are fill'd up with Men and Women Fools. It is a ſufficient ſign of Folly to be always haunting Weddings and ſuch publick Meetings, to which Fools reſort either to eat and drink, or to ſhow their fine Cloaths, or becauſe they know not how to ſpend their time better.

Prov. De táles Bódas táles tórtas: Of ſuch Weddings ſuch Cakes. That is, From ſuch Company you muſt expect ſuch Actions, or ſuch a courſe of Life muſt come to ſuch an End, or ſuch Cauſes will produce ſuch Effects. You can expect no more from a Cat but her Skin. They ſay the occaſion of the Prov. was a Gentleman's marrying a Lady that was not ſo chaſt as Lucretia, and at his Wedding ſome Wag brought in Cakes ſtuck with Cornupias, and ſome asking what that meant another anſwer'd, Such a Wedding ſuch Cakes; alluding to the Horns that threatned the Gentleman.

Prov. Eſſe es de Bóda, que duérme con la nóbia: He has moſt ſhare in the Wedding who lies with the Bride. That is, he is the principal Gueſt, he has moſt Intereſt in the Wedding, for he has all the Enjoyment of the Feaſt and Bride at another's Expence.

Prov. La Bóda de los póbres toda es vózes: Poor Peoples Weddings are all Noiſe. Becauſe, as was ſaid above in the Blacks Wedding, the Poor have not that Order and Decency as the Rich, and all their Pleaſure is Noiſe and Confuſion.

Prov. La mas hermóſa de tódas como la ótra háze Bódas: The Beautifulleſt of them all makes a Wedding like another. This is a Check to the Pride of thoſe Women who are conceited of their Beauty, to give them to underſtand that the beſt they can expect is but to be marry'd and us'd as other Women are, to breed Children, bring them forth with Pain, and perhaps be no more valu'd.

Prov. La que no báyla de la Bóda ſe ſálga: Let her that does not dance turn out of the Wedding. When you are at Rome you muſt do as they do at Rome. In Company no one muſt be ſingular, but do as the Company does, or elſe leave it, leaſt they be look'd upon as Spies on the actions of others. It is alſo advice to Men to mind their buſineſs or employments, or not to undertake what they cannot, or will attend.

Prov. Lo que no ſe háze a la Bóda, no ſe háze a tóda hóra. What is not done at the Wedding, is not done at any indifferent time. That is, if people do not perform at the proper Seaſons, as making a Feaſt at the Wedding, or the like, it is in vain to expect it of them at another time. Applicable to thoſe that refuſe to do things in ſeaſon, and ſeek delays, promiſing from day to day what ought to be perform'd out of hand.

Prov. Ni Bóda ſin cánto, ni mortuório ſin llánto: There's no Wedding without Singing, nor no Burial without Weeping. This is natural, ſince every body endeavours to rejoyce at Weddings, and at Funerals many Weep, tho' it be but for faſhion.

Prov. No ay Bóda ſin tornabóda: There is no Wedding without a ſecond Wedding Feaſt. It is the Spaniſh Cuſtome, after the Bridegroom has celebrated the Feſtival of his Nuptials as long as he thinks fit, for the Wife's Father to treat all the Company ſplendidly, and this they call Tornaboda, that is, the repetition of the Wedding. Or if this fails, the Bridegroom performs it himſelf, which is the reaſon they ſay. There is no Wedding, without the repetition of the Wedding, becauſe it is look'd upon as an indiſpenſable duty.

Prov. No ſe háze la Bóda de hóngos, ſinò es de buénos ducádos redóndos. The wedding is not made of Muſhroomes, but of good round Ducats. That is, it is not a ſlight matter like Muſhrooms, that will defray the expence of a Wedding, but it requires good round Ducats, a round expence, and not by halves. Applicable to any that think to do great matters with a ſmall charge.

Prov. La fláca báyla en la bóda, que no la górda: The lean one Dances at the Wedding, and not the fat one. This Proverb is by way of advice to unweildy Women, that they do not covet to go to places where there muſt be Dancing, becauſe they will be ſham'd by young tender Girls, who are fit for that ſport. In general, it directs all Perſons to apply themſelves to that they are fit for, and not to aim at what they can never perform.

Prov. Qual Bóda ſin Dóña Tóda: What Wedding is there without Doña Tóda. This is a reproof to all thoſe that thruſt themſelves into every Company, and take care to miſs no merry bout, as they ſay this Doña Toda did, from whom the Proverb took its riſe.

Prov. Quién ſe enſáña en la bóda, piérdela tóda: He that takes pet at a Wedding, loſes it all. If a Man grows paſſionate and pettiſh, he either goes away and ſo has no ſhare of the merry making, or if he ſtays, is ſo diſcompos'd, that it little affects him. To inſtruct us not to be eaſily provok'd, or grow angry in Company that is met to be jovial and merry.

Prov. Quién bién báyla, de Bóda en bóda ſe ánda: He that is a good Dancer goes from one Wedding to another. Whoever has any particular Grace, as Dancing, Singing, good Converſation, or the like, is always acceptable in ſuch merry meetings, and therefore is commonly invited, or if not, eaſily intrudes.

Prov. Si déſta eſcápo, y no muéro, núnca mas Bódas al ciélo: If I eſcape this, and do not die, I'll never go ſee more Weddings in Heaven. This is a Fable, that the Fox ſeeing the Eagle very weary, ask'd where ſhe had been, who anſwer'd that at a Wedding in Heaven. The Fox deſir'd her the next Wedding there was in Heaven to carry her thither, which was what the Eagle deſir'd, and accordingly came and took up the Fox, whom from a great height ſhe let fall. The Fox as ſhe was tumbling cry'd out, If I eſcape this bout and am not kill'd, I'll ne're go to more Weddings in Heaven. Apply'd to thoſe who having run themſelves into ſome great danger, take warning by it, and promiſe if they eſcape, never to run ſuch hazards again.

Prov. A la Bóda del herréro, cáda qual con ſu dinéro: Every one goes with his own Money to the Blackſmiths Wedding. This is in Country Towns, where there is but one Smith, and therefore all the People court him, ſo they go to his Wedding, and every one carries ſomething to preſent him. Every one is free to preſent where there is a proſpect of intereſt.

Prov. Quándo fuéres a la Bóda pon tu ólla: When you go to a Wedding hang on your own Pot. That is, provide Meat at home, tho' you go to a Feaſt, for fear of what may happen, ſee more of this above under the Proverb, A la boda de Don Garcia, &c.

Prov. Cáda úno en ſu Cáſa, y Diós en la de tódos. Every one in his Houſe, and God in all of them. We ſay, Every one for himſelf and God for us all.

Prov. En tu Cáſa cuézen hábas y en la mía caldéras. In your Houſe they boil Beans, and in mine Kettles full. There is ſomething to do in your Houſe, but much more in mine. It is generally taken in an ill ſenſe, as when there is much quarrelling in a Houſe, or the like.

Prov. En Cáſa de ahórcado no ſe ha de nombrár la ſóga. The Rope is not to be nam'd in a Houſe that a Man has been hang'd out of. That is, we muſt be ſo far from reproaching any Body with their Misfortunes, that we muſt not name thoſe things which may put them in mind of them.

Prov. En Cáſa del tamboritéro tódos ſon dantarínes. In the Taborer's Houſe they are all Dancers. That is, the whole Family is ſomething like the head, for as the Maſter Tabors ſo they Dance.

Prov. Pués que ſa quéma la cáſa calentémonos tódos. Since the Houſe is a Fire let us all warm our ſelves. That is, let us make the beſt of all Misfortunes.

Prov. A y-dos de mi Cáſa, y que quereis con mi múger, no ay que reſpónder. There is no anſwer to get you out of my Houſe, and what have you to do with my Wife. There is no doubt but every one ought to be Maſter ſter of his own Houſe, and of his Wife, and therefore when he bids any Man go out of his Houſe, or not have to do with his Wife, the beſt way is to make no anſwer.

Prov. En Caſa del Herréro peór apéro. The worſt Tools are in the Smith's Houſe. Or, En caſa del herréro cuchíllo mangorréro. In the Smith's Houſe a bad Knife. Or as we expreſs, none worſe Shod than the Shoe-maker's Wife.

Prov. No me búſque en mi Caſa, quién me puéde hallár en la pláça. Let him not look for me at home, who can meet me in the Market-place. Men who have much buſineſs abroad, do not love to be diſturb'd at home, whither they go to take their reſt, having Offices or other proper Places abroad for buſineſs.

Prov. Caſa con dos puértas, quándo mas cerrádés, tanlas por abiértas. When a Houſe has two Doors, tho' they are never ſo faſt Lock'd, you may make account they are wide open. That is, you can never be ſecure where there is a back Door, for whilſt you watch one, you may be betray'd at the other. See two more Proverbs to this effect above.

Prov. Antes de caſár, ten cáſas en que morár, y tiérras en que labrár, y viñas que podár. Before you Marry get a Houſe to live in, Lands to Till, and a Vineyard to Prune. That is, do not Marry till you have wherewith to maintain your Family.

Prov. Cáſa de pádre, viñá de aguélo, Olivár de reviſaguélo. A Father's Houſe, a Grandfather's Vineyard, and a great Grand-father's Olive Garden. That is, theſe are beſt, viz. a Houſe built by one's Father, which is ſeaſon'd and not decay'd, a Vineyard by ones Grand-father becauſe it is beſt of ſome ſtanding, and the Olive Garden requires much time to grow up to perfection.

Prov. Con mal ánda la Caſa, dónde la ruéca mánda al eſpáda. That Houſe is in bad plight, where the Diſtaff commands the Sword. Where the Woman wears the Breeches.

Caſáda, a marry'd Woman, a Wife.

Caſadéro, marriageable, of Age to marry.

Caſádo, Marry'd. Alſo a married Man, a Husband.

Prov. A la mal caſáda miráde a la cára. Look upon the Face of a Wife that has an ill Husband. This is in general, look upon a Woman and by her Face you may diſcover whether ſhe has a good Husband.

Prov. Quién áma la caſáda la vida tráe empreſtáda. He who loves a marry'd Woman has his life but upon Courteſie. That is, till the Husband diſcovers the intreague and kills him.

Prov. Bién, o mal caſádo me hán. Well or ill I am Marry'd. That is, when a thing is paſt, there is no looking back.

Caſamáta, a Cazematte, which is a Platform in that part of the Flank of the Baſtion next the Curtin, ſomewhat retir'd and drawn back towards the Capital of the Baſtion, on which Guns are planted, loaded with ſmall ſhot to ſcoure along the Ditch, and cover'd from the Enemies Works with Earth-works, call'd Orillon's, or Epaulments.

Caſamentéro, a Match-maker.

Caſamiénto, a Wedding.

Prov. No ay Caſamiénto póbre, ni mortuório rico. There is no poor Wedding, nor rich Burial. That is, always new Marry'd People are ſaid to have great Portions and Eſtates, and Widows alſo pretend they are left poor.

Prov. Caſamiénto, y bádas málas préſto ſon llegádas, Marriage and ill luck are not long a coming. Said by thoſe that love a looſe-Life.

Prov. Caſamiénto hágas que á pléyto ándes: May you Marry ſo that you may have Law ſutes. That is, rather a Curſe than Proverb, as wiſhing a Man may be at Variance with his Wife's Kindred, who ought to be his Friends.

Prov. Déſtos caſamiéntos que Maripárda háze a únos péſa, y a ótros pláze: Some are pleas'd and ſome diſpleas'd at theſe Matches Maripárda makes. That is, whoever meddles in ſuch Affairs can never pleaſe all People.

Caſamúro, a ſingle Wall without any other works.

Caſañéro, one of the Houſe.

Caſár, to Marry, to Wed. Hebrew Caſár, to Bind.

Prov. Antes que te cáſes, míra lo que házes, que no es núdo que aſsí deſátes: Before you Marry, take heed what you do, for it is no Knot that can be eaſily unty'd. That is very plain Advice to be cautious in the Affair of Matrimony, becauſe it is indiſſoluble. It may be apply'd in other caſes, as we ſay, look before you Leap.

Prov. Caſár, Caſár, y quién ha de governár: Marry, Marry, and who muſt rule the Houſe. A reproof to young People that would Marry before they have Senſe to Govern a Family. It is ſaid upon any occaſion, when People would undertake what they are not capable of.

Prov. Caſár, y compadrár, cáda qual con ſu yguál: Let every one Marry and make a Goſſip of his equal. A general Advice to endeavour in all things to have to do with our equals, eſpecially in Matrimony, becauſe inequality of Birth or Fortune is often the cauſe of Diſcord.

Prov. Cáſate verás, perderás ſuéño, núnca dormirás: Marry and you'll ſee what will come of it, you'l loſe your Sleep, and never cloſe your Eyes. A Proverb to expreſs the Care that Matrimony brings upon a Man.

Prov. Caſarás, y amanſarás: You'll Marry and grow tame. It is a common ſaying in Engliſh, if you will tame any one Marry him.

Prov. Caſár ruynes, y naceràn montarácés: Marry a baſe couple you'l have a wild breed. It is a general Opinion that the Children take after the Parents, and ſometimes it may be, but daily experince ſhows the contrary. In Beaſts indeed the main thing is the Breed, but in Man I think Education is the Principal.

Prov. De cédo caſár, y cédo madrugár, arrepentírte hás, mas no múcho mal: You'l repent Marrying early, and Riſing very early, but there is no great harm in either.

Prov. Péra mal caſár, mas válc núnca maridár: Better never be a Husband, or have a Husband, than ill Marry'd.

Prov. Quién léxos ſe va a caſár, o va engañádo, o va a engañár: He that goes a great way to Marry is either Cheated, or goes to Cheat. We find this too often verify'd, for things at a great Diſtance are ſeldome truly repreſented.

Prov. Quién tárde cáſa, mal cáſa: He that Marries late Marries ill. Becauſe they ought to Marry young to have Children, and to be us'd to one another's Temper, for old People when they firſt come together cannot bear with one another's Failings, and the Scripture ſays, Bonum eſt viro cum portáverit jugum ab adoleſcentia ſua.

Prov. Quién mal cáſa, tárde embiúda: It is long before he becomes a Widdower, who Marries ill. That is, when People are ill Marry'd they always think it long before the Widowhood comes.

Prov. Si quiéres bién caſár, cáſa con tu yguál: If you would be well Marry'd, Marry your Equal. This we have above under the words, Caſár y compadrár, cáda qual con ſu yguál.

Prov. Caſár, Caſár ſuéna bién, y ſábe mal: Marry, Marry, ſounds well, and reliſhes but ill. That is, people talk of Marrying with a great deal of pleaſure, but afterwards meet with cares and troubles that give it an ill reliſh.

Prov. La que con muchos ſe cáſa, a tódos enfáda. She that is Marry'd to many tires them all. In the literal Senſe, a Woman that Marries many Husbands, is ſuppos'd to weary them out of their Lives with her ill temper. But otherwiſe by Caſár con múchos, to marry many, is only meant an impertinent Woman, that has an Oar in every Man's Boat, and has buſineſs with every Body, which vexes and tires all the World.

Cóca, is a ſmall green Leaf growing on little Trees or Buſhes about a Man's height, in exceſſive hot and very moiſt Land. The Tree bears this Leaf every four Months. It requires much Care in cultivating, and much more to preſerve it when gather'd. They lay it very orderly into long narrow Baskets, which they load on the Sheep of the Country, and they travel with this Commodity in Flocks carrying two or three thouſand Baskets. It generally grows in the Country they call los Andes, in Bottoms which are intolerable hot, where it rains moſt part of the Year; and it coſts the Indians intolerable Labour and many Lives to look after it, becauſe they go for it from the cold Mountains. The Uſe of it is only to chew and ſuck the Juice of it, but not ſwallow the Leaf. It doubtleſs is nouriſhing, for the Indians will travel great Journeys, or do any other great Labour without eating, with only a handful of Coca. It has an unpleaſant Taſte, and they powder it with Aſhes, or Lime. F. Joſ. Acoſt. Nat. Hiſt. W. Ind. lib. 4. chap. 22. p. 252.

Cóco, a Worm that eats the Vines, or other Trees; or any ſuch ſort of Worm or Inſect. Alſo the Word us'd to fright Children, as we ſay the Bulbeggar.

Cóco, o Palma de las Indias. The Coco-Tree, otherwiſe call'd the Indian Palm-Tree, becauſe like the Palm being tall, hard, and putting out greater Branches the higher they riſe. The Fruit call'd alſo Cocos, or Coco-Nuts by us, have a Shell whereof they make drinking Cups. The Kernel taſts ſomewhat like a New Almond, but when hanging on the Tree all within is Water, which they drink as a great Dainty, and to cool them in hot Weather. They ſay the Tree puts out a new Cluſter of Coco-Nuts every Month, ſo that it produces twelve times in a Year. They are commonly as big as a ſmall Musk-melon. There is another ſort they call Coquillos, or little Coco-Nuts, which is a better ſort of Fruit, and grows in the Kingdom of Chile, they are ſomewhat leſs than Walnuts, but rounder. There is yet another ſort, which does not give one ſingle Kernel, but a great many little ones like Almonds, which are in it like the Seeds in a Pomgranat. Theſe Almonds are three times as big as thoſe of Caſtile, and taſte like them, but are a little harder; they are alſo juicy and oily. They are pleaſant to eat, and for want of the others ſerve to make Marchpanes, and ſuch like Dainties. They call them Almonds of the Andes, becauſe abundance of them grow in the Andes of Peru, and they are ſo hard, that they require a great ſtroak with a Stone to break them. F. Joſ. Acoſt. Nat. Hiſt. W. Ind. lib. 4. chap. 26. p. 259. In the Maldivy Iſlands they build, rig, and fit out Ships from this Tree alone, which furniſhes all the Timber, Maſts, Yards, Sails, and Rigging; and when fit to ſail, they load her with Commodities from the ſame Tree, as Oil, Wine, Vinegar, black Sugar, Fruit, and Strong Water. With this Tree alone they build good Houſes, and cover them with the Leaves. The Body of the Tree affords Timber for building, of the Leaves they make Sails, of the outward Shell of the Nut all the Cordage and Rigging. The Wine is made by cutting a Branch of the Tree, and putting a Veſſel under, into which that Liquor diſtils, and is call'd Sura. This ſeveral times diſtill'd becomes a Strong Water, whereof there are two ſorts, the beſt call'd Fula, and the ſecond ſort Arach, or as we call it Rack. The ſame Sura ſet in the Sun becomes Vinegar. After the firſt running of the Sura from the Tree, they receive the laſt running in another Veſſel, which boil'd becomes Sugar, call'd there Figra. The inward hard Shell ſerves to makes Cups and Diſhes, and is alſo us'd for Firing by curious Goldſmiths in thoſe parts. Of the Nut enough has been ſaid, but in the Eaſt Indies they dry it, and ſo keep it all the Year, carrying it to ſeveral parts. Of this dry'd Kernel they alſo make very good Oil, and another ſort of it green. Acoſta Nat. Hiſt. of the Eaſt Indies.

ſoſóbra, Trouble, Affliction, Croſneſs of Fortune: But moſt properly, and from thence apply'd to ſignify as above, it is the Wind, when it blows right a-head, which makes the Men that row in a Galley labour hard, and ſhe beats as if ſhe went upon Stones. The Story is that an Old Woman being pay'd before hand for ſpinning a pound of Flax, ſhe drank out the Money, and every time ſhe went to Spin cry'd, God take you, but meant the Devil take the pound of Flax, becauſe the price of ſpinning was ſpent before.

Prov. Allá me lléve Diós a morár, do un huévo vále un reál: God ſend me to Live, where an Egg is worth a groat. That is, God grant I may live in a Rich Country, for where there is plenty of Money all things are dear proportionably, and there the moſt Money is to be got, and there is the beſt living.

Prov. Andá con Diós, y con romadízo, la piérna quebráda, y el quadríl ſalído: God go with you, and a running Cold, a broken Leg, and the Bone ſticking out. A back Prayer, but commonly ſpoke in Jeſt.

Prov. A quién Diós quiére bién en Sevílla le dió de comér: Him that God loves well, he gives him whereon to live in Sevil. That is, they are belov'd by God who can live in that City, this is a Proverb made by the admirers of Sevil, as others ſay, Quién no ha víſto a Sevílla, no ha víſto maravílla. He that has not ſeen Sevil, has ſeen no wonder. And of Madrid, De Madríd al ciélo. From Madrid to Heaven, as if it were ſo fine a place that a Man ought to covet to ſee nothing after it.

Prov. A quién Diós quiére bién la pérra le páre lechónes. The Man whom God loves his Bitch brings forth Pigs. That is, where God's Bleſſing is, all things turn to a Man's advantage.

Prov. Buéno, Buéno, Buéno, mas guárde Diós mi Búrrá de ſu centéno. Good, good, good, but God keep my Aſs out of his Rye. That is, ſuch a one is a very good Man every Body ſays, becauſe no Body tries to touch him in the ſenſible part of his Goods, therefore ſays the Country Man, God keep my Aſs out of his Rye, for if ſhe gets in and Eats but a Mouthful, as good as he is he'll put her in the Pound, and me to Trouble.

Prov. A tuérto, y a derécho ayúde Diós a muéſtro concéjo. Right or wrong, God help our Council. A ſaying of obſtinate Men of no Conſcience, who would have God proſper their undertakings, tho' never ſo unjuſt. This is ſaid to ſuch Men, when they pray for Succeſs to ill Deſigns.

Prov. Da Diós álas a la hormíga, pára que ſe piérda mas ayna. God gives the Ant Wings that ſhe may Periſh the ſooner. That is, God raiſes up baſe Men that they may have the greater Fall. Tolluntur in altum ut lapſu graviore ruant.

Prov. Da Diós alméndras a quién no tiéne muélas. God gives Almonds to thoſe that have no Teeth. Alſo, Da Diós habas a quién no tiéne quixádas. God gives Beans to thoſe that have no Jaws. They are two Proverbs to the ſame Effect, and ſignify, that God gives Plenty and Riches to thoſe that have not the Heart to do good with them.

Prov. Dé Diós viéne el bién, de las abéjas miél. All good comes from God, and Honey from the Bees. This is a pious Proverb, to put us in mind that whatever Bleſſings we receive come from the Hand of God.

Prov. De al me véngue Diós, que del paſtór água y niéve: God give me revenge of others, for the Snow and Rain will revenge me upon the Shepherd. Theſe were the Words of a Gentleman, who being wrong'd by his Shepherd was adviſ'd to puniſh, him, and anſwer'd with this Proverb, as thinking the hardſhips the poor Shepherd endur'd were puniſhment enough for him. And this is a Chriſtian ſaying, to leave it to God to puniſh the Rich that offend us and for the Poor to think their own Sufferings are puniſhment enough.

Prov. De Diós hablár y del múndo obrár. To talk of God, and act Worldly. This we ſee practis'd daily, and needs no explaining, it anſwers to a Wolf in Sheeps Cloathing.

Prov. De lo féo a lo hermóſo déme Diós lo provechóſo. Of the Beautiful, or ugly, God give me that which is profitable. That is, I value not Beauty or Deformity, but Profit. As when a Man refuſes a Beautiful poor Wife, for one that is Ugly and Rich.

Prov. De aquélla me déxe Diós comér, que déxa los póllos, y comiénça a ponér. God give me to eat of her that leaves the Chickens, and begins to Lay. This is only wiſhing for a Pullet with Eggs, that is one that is paſt being reckon'd among Chickens, and begins to be with Egg.

Prov. Díze al doliénte el ſáno. Diós te de ſalúd hermáno. He that is well ſays to the Sick Man, God give you Health Brother. This Proverb declares we are free enough of our good Wiſhes, and therefore they uſe it when one refuſes to give an Alms and only ſays to a Poor Man, God help you; for we are ready enough to give good Wiſhes, but not to open our Purſes.

Prov. Echa Diós água que hécho eſt ádo cáya: God ſend Rain for the place is made for it to fall on. So ſays the Countryman when he has ſow'd, and it is apply'd in all other caſes where a Man has diſpos'd all things for ſucceſs and now only prays for Gods Bleſſing to his endeavours.

Prov. Eſſo ſe háze, lo que a Diós pláze: That is done, which pleaſes God. That is, we may be ſatisfy'd that what God ordains will be.

Prov. Fiár de Diós ſóbre buéna prénda; To truſt in God upon good ſecurity. This the Poor ſay they Rich do, who put their truſt in God becauſe they have good Eſtates for their ſecurity.

Prov. Guárdete Diós de hécho es: God keep you from it is done. That is, God deliver us from evils that are done and cannot be recall'd, becauſe what is done cannot be undone.

Prov. Guárdete Diós del Diáblo, de ójo de Ramera, y buélta de dádo: God defend you from the Devil, the eye of a Harlot, and the turn of a Dye. This is a Prayer for Soul, Body, and Purſe, the words are plain enough, and need no Expoſition.

Prov. Guardádo es lo que Diós guárda: That is well kept which God keeps. Nothing is ſafe but what God ſecures, according to that of the Pſalmiſt Niſi dominus cuſtodierit civitatem fruſtra vigilat qui cuſtodit eam.

Prov. Hízonos Diós, y maravillámonos nos: God made us and we admire at it. That is, we do not underſtand the great works of God, and yet we are proud and vain, and inſtead of praiſing him for his works, endeavour to pry into them, and dive into his ſecrets.

Prov. Lo que Diós da llevárſe ha: What God gives muſt be born. There is no oppoſing the will of God and if he gives troubles they muſt be born with patience. What can't be cur'd muſt be endur'd.

Prov. Mas puéde Diós ayudár, que velár ni madrugár: God can help more than watching, or riſing early. The bleſſing of God is beyond all human endeavours.

Prov. Mas vále táque táque, que Diós os ſálve: Taque Taque is better than God ſave you. Taque taque, here ſignifies the noiſe of the Hammer knocking at a Street Door, and the Proverb means, it is better there ſhould be knocking at your Door than that any body ſhould come into your Houſe unknown till he ſays, God ſave you.

Prov. Miénte mas que da por Diós: He lyes more than he gives for God ſake. This is to denote a great lyar, or one that makes no conſcience of what he ſays.

Prov. No te de Diós mas mal, que múchos héjos y póco pan: God give you no greater Curſe than many Children and little Bread. This is Miſery enough, and ſo plain as not to want expounding.

Prov. No de Dios a nuéſtros amígos tánto bién que nos deſconóſcan: May it pleaſe God not to make our Friends ſo happy, as that they may not know us. This is too frequent in the World, and therefore the Proverb is good, to pray they may not have ſo much as not to forget themſelves, as we daily ſee men puff'd up with with their fortunes, who then refuſe to know their beſt Friends.

Prov. No hízo Diós a quién deſamparár. God made none to forſake them. Tho' never ſo low, or unfortunate God's providence is over all, and he takes care of the leaſt, as well as the greateſt, if they confide in him.

Prov. No hiére Diós con dos mános, que a la mar hízo puértos, y a los ríos vádos: God does not Wound with both Hands, for he made Ports to the Sea and Fords to the Rivers. That is, God does not ſend Calamities without ſome Comforts, he lays not on his ſtrokes with both Hands that is to ſink us under them, but as there are Ports to the raging Sea, and Fords in Rapid Rivers, ſo there are ſome means of Comfort, or Relief in the greateſt Sorrows, or Diſtreſs.

Prov. Plégue a Diós que náſca el peregíl en el háſcua: God grant the Pirſley may grow in the Fire. This they ſay when they wiſh ſome good may be made of ſome great Misfortune.

Prov. Quándo Diós quiére con tódos viéntos lluéve: When God pleaſes it Rains with all Winds. That is, when God pleaſes any the moſt unlikely things turn to our Advantage.

Prov. Quándo no tenía dávate, agóra que no te daré, ruéga a Diós que no ténga, porqué te de: When I had not I gave you, now I have I will not give you, pray to God I may not have that I may give you. Theſe are the words of a Covetous Man. or rather of one upbraiding ſuch a Perſon, and ſignifies, when I had not, that is when I had little, I gave ſome of that little, now I have, that is, much, I will give none, for Avarice is moſt prevalent on thoſe that have moſt, therefore we ought to pray to God that he would reſtore ſuch a one to his Poverty, that he might be reſtor'd to his Charity.

Prov. Quándo Diós quería, allénde la bárba eſcupía, agóra que no puédo, eſcúpome aquí luégo: When it pleaſed God I us'd to ſpit beyond my Beard, now I cannot do ſo, I ſpit here cloſe by. Literally theſe are the Words of an ancient Man who cannot ſpit from him, but ſays he could when he was Young, and muſt now be ſatify'd to do as he can. But metaphorically they are us'd by any that have been Rich, or in Power and are fallen to a low Condition, who thus expreſs that when they were in their flouriſhing Eſtate, they did what they pleas'd, but now they do what they can.

Prov. Qual Diós te hízo tal te apiáde: As God made you ſo may he have Compaſſion of you. This they ſay to a naturall, or any other that cannot help himſelf, praying to God that ſince he has made him ſo Wretched he will accordingly provide for him.

Prov. Diós proveerá, mas buén haz de pája ſe querrá: God will provide but he will expect a good truſs of Straw for himſelf. Theſe are literally the Words of a brutall Clown grudging God his Offering, or Tythes, but apply'd to any one who receives much and grudges to make a ſmall Return or Acknowledgement out of it.

Prov. Quándo Diós no quiére el ſánto no puéde: When God will not the Saint cannot. That is, when God has decreed otherwiſe, the Saints to whom we pray for Interceſſion cannot alter the Decree. There is no ſtriving againſt the will of God.

Prov. Quál éra Diós pára mercadér: What a good Shopkeeper, or Merchant God would make. That is, how would any one thrive that knew what was to come, as God does.

Prov. Quándo Diós quiére en ſeréno lluéve: When God pleaſes it Rains in Fair Weather. That is, tho' all appear never ſo Calm, or Proſperous, if God pleaſes he can raiſe ſudden Storms, or overthrow our Proſperity.

Prov. Quién biéu eſtá, y mal búſca, ſi mal le viéne, Diós le ayúda: He that is well and ſeeks to be ill, if ill befall him, God helps him. That is, God grants him what he ſought for, tho' it be to his loſs, for God often gives a Man that for his Puniſhment, which he ſought after for his Satisfaction.

Prov. Quién ſiémbra en Diós eſpéra: He that ſows hopes in God. So in all other things when a Man uſes his endeavours he hopes God will give a Bleſſing.

Prov. Quien no kábla Diós no le óye: God does not hear him who does not ſpeak. without a Man makes known his wants or his deſires, he cannot expect to be reliev'd, therefore theſe Words are in common uſe to thoſe who ſay they have long wanted any thing yet did not ſpeak before.

Prov. Quién yérra, y ſe enmiénda, a Diós ſe encomiénda: He that commits a fault and mends, recommends himſelf to God. That is, as frail Men we commit faults, but if we endeavour to amend God's Mercy accepts of that ſign of our Repentance, and the very amendment is a ſort of Prayer to God.

Prov. Quién ſe múda Diós le ayúda: He that removes God helps him. This may be taken in a ſuperſtitious ſenſe, as if removing from one place to another did alter a Man's Fortune; but the true meaning is that generally People remove to better themſelves, for we do ſeldom go from one place to another but upon ſome Proſpect of Advantage, or Satisfaction.

Prov. Quén ſe guárda, Diós le guárda: God keeps him that keeps himſelf. That is, if a Man takes care to keep himſelf out of Danger, it is likely God will keep him from their ill Conſequences. We muſt not run our ſelves into needleſs dangers out of a vain Confidence in God.

Prov. Quién de los ſúyos ſe aléxa, Diós le déxa: God forſakes him that removes far from his Friends. It means that Friends and Relations are more likely to do for a Man than Strangers. This Proverb is good in Spain, where Kindred never fail to help one another, but in England where this is little practis'd, it is of no value, for here only thoſe are a-kin to the Rich who are as well to paſs as they, the Poor Relations are diſown'd and caſt off.

Prov. Rogámos a Diós por ſántos, mas no por tántos: We pray'd to God for Saints, but not for ſo many. Literally a ſaying of Poor labouring People, when too many Holydays come, on which they muſt not Work. But apply'd in any other caſe, when things come too faſt. Too much of one thing is good for nothing.

Prov. Si Diós quiſiére, y Juán viniére, echarémos a Pedro de caſa: If God pleaſes, and John comes, we'll turn Peter out of Doors. That is, if we can get a better Servant, we'll turn away a worſe. Or in any other ſenſe, If it pleaſes God to furniſh us with what is better, we will fare better.

Prov. Si Diós de aqui me levánta; mañána hilaré úna mánta. Sol y día buéno, que ménta. O que duálo: If it pleaſe God I riſe to morrow I'll ſpin a Blanket. The Sun ſhines and 'tis a fair day, what need of a Blanket, or where's the Grief. An Old Woman being very cold in her Bed, promis'd if ſhe liv'd till the next day to ſpin for a Blanket, but the Sun ſhining and feeling her ſelf warm the next day, ſhe did not care for ſpinning and thought there was no need of a Blanket. This is apply'd to all People who in their diſtreſs make fair promiſes, and perform Nothing, when they are deliverv'd from them. We ſay, they are Vows made in Storms, forgot as ſoon as it is Calm.

Prov. Válate Diós Pédro. No cal, que el áſno es récio: God help you Peter. No need, for the Aſs is ſtrong: A good Man ſeing an Aſs run away with a Country Fellow, cry'd, God help you, fearing he might fall. There's no need ſays the Clown, for the Aſs is ſtrong. Apply'd to thoſe who are grown Rich and great, and when Men ſay, God help them, are ſo Proud that they think they do not ſtand in need of God.

Prov. Vínole Diós a ver ſin campanílla, God came to ſee him without a Bell. This they ſay when a Man has any great Happineſs befals him unexpected, they ſay, God came to ſee him that is with a Bleſſing, and without a Bell, becauſe when the Bleſſed Sacrament is carry'd to dying Men, which is God going to Viſit them, there goes a Bell before to give notice.

Prov. Quiéra Diós Matéa, que éſte hijo nuéſtro ſéa: God grant Matthea this be our Son. This is the Prayer of a Country Man who Marry'd a Wife and ſhe was brought to bed at ſix Months end, which made him miſtruſt the Child was not his, but a Phyſician who had got it perſwaded him, he was more than other Men, who could get a Child in ſix Months, yet the doubt remaining in his Head he ſtill ſaid, God grant the Child be ours. This is applicable in all ſorts of doubts but moſt us'd when Men boaſt of Actions, or Works, which we miſtruſt are not their own, for then this Proverb is well apply'd to them. We have a blunt ſaying, I pray God you be John, not unlike it, and taken from a Wench who had a Man in Bed with her, and much doubted whether it was her reall ſweet-heart.

Prov. Deſpués de Diós la ólla: Next to God the Olla; that is, the Pot of boyl'd Meat and Soupe, which the Spaniards are ſo great admirers of that it caus'd this ſaying. Some Wags add, Dize el Biſcayno, aún ántes ſi puedo. The Biſcainer ſays, and before if I can. Repreſenting the Biſcainer as ſuch an Atheiſt that he prefers it before God.

Los Diſlátes de Juan de la Enzína: The abſurdities of John de la Enzina. This John de la Enzina, was a very Learned Man in Salamanca, who compos'd a ſort of Doggrell Rhimes extraordinary Ingenious, but ſo contriv'd that they ſound like Abſurdities, under which much Wit and Judgment is couch'd. Theſe took ſo well with all ſorts of people that many other ſerious things he compos'd were loſt, and it remain'd a Proverb when any body ſpeaks Abſurdly, to ſay, they are the Abſurdities of John de la Enzina. He being upon a Journey the Inn Keeper's Wife hear'd the Servants Name their Maſter John de la Enzina, whereupon ſhe ſtept up to him, and gazing in his Face ſaid, Sir, was it you that compos'd the Abſurdities. At which he was much out of Countenance and gave her ſome hard Words, wherein he was Guilty of the greateſt Abſurdity.
